AUTHORITY AND REFERENCE (pursuant to GOV § 11346.5(a)(2) and 1 CCR § 14)

Authority cited: Sections 4551, 4551.5, 4553, 4561, 4561.5, 4562, 4562.5, 4562.7 and 4591.1, Public Resources Code.

INFORMATIVE DIGEST/POLICY STATEMENT OVERVIEW (pursuant to GOV 11346.5(a)(3)(A)-(D))

Pursuant to the Z'berg-Nejedly Forest Practice Act of 1973, PRC § 4511, et seq. (FPA) the State Board of Forestry and Fire Protection (Board) is authorized to construct a system of forest practice regulations applicable to timber management on state and private timberlands.

PRC § 4551 requires the Board to "...adopt district forest practice rules... to ensure the continuous growing and harvesting of commercial forest tree species and to protect the soil, air, fish, wildlife, and water resources..." of the state and PRC § 4553 requires the Board to continuously review the rules in consultation with other interests and make appropriate revisions.

During the 2023 call for Regulatory Review the California State Water Resources Control Boards raised an issue with the definitions for the terms "Meadows and Wet Areas" and "Wet Meadows and Other Wet Areas". The two terms originated from different Forest Districts, and have a different set of uses. The term "Meadows and Wet Areas" is used in the Forest Practice Rules to describe both areas that do not support a crop of trees and areas that can be covered by the restoration special prescription described in §913.4(e) (§933.4(e), 953.4(e)). "Wet Meadows and other Wet Areas" is used to define areas that require additional measures to prevent ecological impacts. The two terms have very similar definitions which rely on a combination of surface moisture and the presence of aquatic vegetation, grasses, or forbs. The existing definitions also do not account for shifts in climate trends. An area that is "moist on the surface" for most of a year with historically average precipitation may not meet that criterion in a drought year, and an area that is "moist on the surface" during a flood year may not provide the species habitat and other ecosystem services that a wet area is presumed to provide. The potential vegetation options in the existing definitions include aquatic plants, which are at least partially submerged in water, and grasses and forbs, which include both species that can only grow in saturated soils and species that can survive in a wide range of soil moisture levels. This lack of consistency means that the size of wet areas waxes and wanes from year to year leading to confusion about protections and an atmosphere of regulatory uncertainty.

Current regulations for the Aspen, and Meadows and Wet Areas restoration special prescription (§§913.4(e), 933.4(e), 953.4(e)) apply only to removal of trees from wet areas and meadows that are currently dominated by non-woody vegetation. The century-long exclusion of fire and other traditional ecological management tools from the forests of California has led to many meadows being overgrown by trees. Current regulation does not allow for restoration to the historical boundaries of meadows and wet areas, limiting the ability to expand these vital habitats.

The problem is that the definitions of the terms “Meadows and Wet Areas” and “Wet Meadows and Other Wet Areas” conflate “meadows” and “wet areas”, two disparate ecological systems with different management requirements. The two existing definitions also do not account for multi-year climate and rainfall trends. In wet years, an area could meet the surface moisture requirement and be dominated by dryland grass species, would fall under the definition for “Wet Meadows and Other Wet Areas”, and would merit the protections accorded to “Wet Meadows and Other Wet Areas”. In a dry year, a different area could lack the surface moisture requirement and be dominated by woody hydrophytic plants, would not meet the definition for “Wet Meadows and Other Wet Areas”, and would not merit those protections.

Additionally, within the “Aspen, Meadows and Wet Areas Restoration” special prescription as described within 14 CCR §§ 913.4(e), (933.4(e), 953.4(e)) meadow restoration via conifer removal is restricted to areas that are currently meadows. As meadows are by definition dominated by grass species, meadows that have been overgrown by conifers due to historical shifts in forest management would not meet the definition and could not be restored using this regulatory pathway.

The purpose of the proposed action is to replace the defined term “Wet Meadows and Other Wet Areas” with the new defined term “Wet Areas”, to remove the defined term “Meadows and Wet Areas” and replace it with an undefined term for “meadows” and the new defined term “Wet Areas”, and to update the Aspen, Meadows, and Wet Areas Restoration Special Prescription to allow for restoration of the historical extent of meadows and wet areas.

The effect of the proposed action is to align definitions with appropriate ecological systems, allow for accurate protections of environmental resources in an uncertain climate, and expand the potential ecosystems eligible for restoration work.

The benefit of the proposed action is rules that allow for the protection of wet areas regardless of annual variation in rainfall and climate, expanded tools for the restoration of meadows and wet areas, and the production of definitions that are clearer, more consistent, and accurately reflect the operational protections required by the Rules.

There is no comparable Federal regulation or statute.

Board staff conducted an evaluation on whether the proposed action is inconsistent or incompatible with existing State regulations pursuant to GOV § 11346.5(a)(3)(D). State regulations related to the proposed action were, in fact, relied upon in the development of the proposed action to ensure the consistency and compatibility of the proposed action with existing State regulations.

Otherwise, Board staff evaluated the balance of existing State regulations related to measures concerning meadows and wet areas during timber operations within State regulations that met the same purpose as the proposed action. Based on this evaluation and effort, the Board has determined that the proposed regulations are neither inconsistent nor incompatible with existing State regulations. The proposed regulation is entirely consistent and compatible with existing Board rules.
